State Disability Determination Services The DDSs are State agencies responsible for developing medical evidence and making the initial determination about whether the claimant is or is not disabled or blind under the law.Ã These State agencies are fully funded by the Federal Government. An individual disabled since childhood (before age 22) who is a dependent of a parent entitled to title II disability or retirement benefits or was a dependent of a deceased insured parent. The Disability Determination Process Most disability claims are initially processed through a network of local Social Security field offices and State agencies (usually called Disability Determination Services, or DDSs). Social Security Field Offices When an individual applies for disability benefits, whether online, in person, by telephone, or by mail, the application is initially processed at an SSA field office. If the claimant is found to be not disabled, the file is retained in the field office in case he or she decides to appeal the determination. Medicaid is financed by Federal and State matching funds, but eligibility rules may vary from State to State. Definition of disability The definition of disability is the same for all persons applying for µ under Title II and for adults applying under Title XVI. Below are some of the most frequently asked questions about these programs. The DDS returns the case to the ³ after making a determination of disability. The ³ takes appropriate action depending on whether the claim is allowed or denied. If the DDS establishes that the applicant is disabled, the SSA will complete any development which is not related to the outstanding deficit, calculate the amount of the benefit and pay the benefits. For children applying for SSI, the process requires sequential review of: the child's current professional activity (if any), the seriousness of his/her disability(s) and an assessment of whether his/her disability(s) correspond(s), is/are clinically equal or is functionally equal to a list. Normally, the DDS gets ©m first proofs of the applicant's medical sources. What Is a "Medically Determinable Deficiency"? If so, the report shall ³ only to an authorized representative designated by the person concerned. Where the evidence is not available or insufficient to establish, the DDS may organize an advisory examination to obtain additional evidence. If a person does not agree with the initial determination in the case, he can appeal.
